Get ready to Feel Good Too

- £11m premier outdoor sports centre opens in Leyton
- New training base for local clubs and athletes in the borough

Following a successful event on Friday 5 October, including visits from local clubs and schools, Feel Good Too officially opened. The new facilities are based on the redevelopment of the former Ive Farm Fields site, off Ive Farm Close in Leyton.

The on-site Discovery Café which is also now open to the public, showcased the wide range of quality food and drink it is offering on site. Discovery Café focuses on a healthy menu and locally grown produce.

The Leader of the Council, Cllr Clare Coghill cut the ribbon along with Olympic gold medal winner, Helen Richardson Walsh from England Hockey, Charlie Grainger and Sam Ling from Leyton Orient FC and pupils from three local schools – Lammas, St Joseph's and Willowbrook – who gave the new facilities a thorough trial.

The scheme builds on the success of the Feel Good Centre in Walthamstow which enjoys around 660,000 user visits every year. Cllr Clare Coghill said: "Feel Good Too will act as a sports hub for the whole borough, as well as a place where local residents can come along to keep fit, take part in sports and make new friends in the local community.

"It's an ideal place for local sports clubs to train as well as providing opportunities for groups of friends to play just for fun.

"Opening Feel Good Too means we can now proceed with the regeneration of The Score Centre site where we will be providing quality homes for local people as well as a new leisure centre and commercial spaces.

"Together these projects provide great opportunities to improve the life chances of local residents.

"This investment will bring real benefits for residents and businesses in Leyton."

Sports clubs previously based at The Score Centre are being relocated to Feel Good Too this month with tenants of the growing beds joining them on the new site later this autumn.

From the Leader

Cllr Clare Coghill

With a huge cultural drum-roll, Claude Monet's 1907 iconic impressionist painting Water-Lilies, Setting Sun arrived at Waltham Forest's William Morris Gallery last week.

The must-see masterpiece forms the highlight of the exhibition, The Enchanted Garden and is not just a ground-breaking cultural moment for local residents and visiting art lovers alike – it symbolises the seeds being sown for the borough's epic cultural events programme, as Waltham Forest blossoms into London's first ever Borough of Culture in 2019.

On 30 October, we will reveal the phenomenal programme of events for the Mayor's Borough of Culture 2019 – we will be welcoming back the famous sons and daughters as well as highlighting local and global art to music, theatre, family events, live performance and more. I'm sure you'll agree that the much-anticipated programme is massively exciting and I can assure you there is something for everyone to enjoy. Its resonance will be felt inside, above and beyond the borough, bringing new people to our corner of London.

At the centre of the project will be a year-long, world-class arts programme, an arts programme drawn from the place, a programme that could only ever be created in Waltham Forest. Work has been genuinely co-created with the artists, creatives and communities from the borough.

I haven't forgotten that it was our residents who made this all possible – from backing the 2019 bid to win the Borough of Culture title to forming a brilliant band of volunteers – The Legends of the Forest – who will help deliver this programme and support us in continuing Waltham Forest's cultural legacy for years to come. It isn't too late to volunteer and make your mark on our year; we are still looking for people to volunteer from across the borough to help showcase Waltham Forest to the world.

Every litter (picker) helps

TEAM WALTHAM FOREST

Andy Crossman is a real community champion. He takes a lot of pride in his neighbourhood and has been voluntarily doing his part to keep Waltham Forest clean for just over 50 years. To mark this amazing milestone, we caught up with Andy to find out more: Hi Andy, tell us about your time in Waltham Forest.

"We know this borough does an outstanding job in caring and looking after its residents. I've been here since my mid 20s and now at the age of 73, I've benefitted from Waltham Forest's focus on the community and the environment in which I've lived."

How did you start to help keep your neighbourhood clean?

"There's a green space in front of our house and on the first day we moved in we decided to help clear litter from it and make the area we were moving into as litter-free as possible. It just continued. I litter pick the area around about once a week now and help to keep it clean."

What are the benefits of litter picking?

"As well as making the areas look tidy and clean, I enjoy getting out in the fresh air and talking to people. It's a really good form of exercise. It helps you to connect with others. We had a street party recently which really brought the local community together, and I encourage others to also get involved."

Do you get support from the Council?

"Yes, Waltham Forest Council really go out of their way to support groups that want to do more especially when it comes to removing litter and fly tipping. They remove graffiti straight away and also remove bulky waste items. The Corporation of London also do a lot of work to keep the local green spaces clean. They do a fantastic job mowing the grass, keeping the edges in check, and they have volunteer litter pickers who help to keep the forest as clean as possible."

You take real pride in your neighbourhood. How can other people play their part?

"People shouldn't drop litter in the first place. Together, we all need to keep our environment as clean and nice as possible. Please drop litter – in the bin."

I'd encourage others to think about doing a litter pick in their local area. It's totally up to you how much time you put in. And you don't need any special training; you pick it up as you go along! Together, we can all make a real difference and keep our borough at its best."

Valued community champion, Andy Crossman, makes a clean sweep

Autumn leaves clear up

Leaving clean streets for everyone

We all love seeing the leaves change and the seasonal colours brighten up our neighbourhoods in autumn. But we also know that fallen leaves can make our pavements and paths slippery and unsafe, especially for children and the elderly. That's why Team Waltham Forest is on the case sweeping up the fallen leaves and keeping the walkways safe for all. This is the at team work on Falmouth Avenue, in Chingford.

4 Life Chances

Life Chances: A good quality education for every child

What sets a child up for success in their life? We believe that a good quality education is essential for every young person to make the most of their natural talents and learn the skills they need.

Young people and their parents in Waltham Forest expect to receive a good education.

Schools in the borough are better than the London average: 97 per cent of Waltham Forest schools are rated by OFSTED as 'good' or 'outstanding', the fourth-highest figure in London. Thanks to the hard work and dedication of teachers, parents and carers, and our young people themselves we have seen exam results that are above the national average and which provide an ideal platform for the journey into adulthood.

The Life Chances Commission has delivered its report that identifies 'a good quality education for every child' as one of four key priorities in our ambition to improve the life chances of every child in Waltham Forest. It also recommends that the council should work with schools to reduce the number of students who regularly miss school, seek opportunities to use the London Borough of Culture programme in 2019 to give young people a chance to express themselves as they learn, and work with schools as they build even stronger relationships with universities, colleges and apprenticeship providers.

Tackling absenteeism

Despite good quality schools, Waltham Forest suffers from high rates of persistent absence among pupils. Last year, over 4,000 pupils were persistently absent from schools in the borough. That is over 12 per cent of all students – this presents a real challenge to the life chances of these young people.

A student who misses 10 per cent or more of their classes is classed as 'persistently absent'. There is a clear link between poor attendance at school and lower academic achievement. Research suggests that children with few or no absences in years 10 and 11 are over twice as likely to achieve five or more good GCSEs, compared to those who miss a high number of lessons.

Acting on the Life Chances Commission's recommendations, the council has put into place an action plan to reduce persistent absence. An event at Heathcote School in early October saw headteachers, school staff and the council coming together to identify the issues, share best practice, and explore ways to involve parents and carers in improving school attendance.

Cllr Grace Williams, Cabinet Member for Children and Young People, said: "I am delighted with the meeting at Heathcote School to launch our action plan. The best way we can tackle persistent absence and make sure that young people don't miss out on their education is by working with schools to engage with parents and carers about the issue.

"The school years are so important, and when we involve the whole community in a child's education that young person will really feel a part of that community. It's about giving that child the confidence they need to make the right decisions in their lives for themselves.

"We all have a responsibility to come together and give young people the support they need, when they need it, so that they can achieve their full potential. We will continue to work closely to sustain this momentum."

Life Chances: Need to know

The Life Chances Commission was established in 2017 by Leader of the Council Clare Coghill to investigate how young people's life chances could be improved in Waltham Forest to allow them to achieve their full potentials. The commission included experts from education and business backgrounds as well as young people themselves, and looked at three key stages of young life: early years, school, and post-school.

The commission delivered its report in September 2018 and the recommended actions will focus across four priority areas: ensuring every child gets the best start in life; providing a good quality education for every child; supporting young people to be resilient, confident and healthy; and giving young people the opportunities to flourish.

The Care Leaver's Hub opens in Leyton

The Care Leaver's Hub supports young people and how they shape their future

To tie in with National Care Leaver's week this month, Waltham Forest Council officially opens the Care Leaver's hub in Leyton Cricket Ground. The Care Leaver's Hub is a place that 16 to 25-year-old Care Leavers from Waltham Forest can go to learn valuable life skills such as budgeting, cooking and socialising with their peers.

The Hub offers a relaxed environment designed by other care leavers and is part of the council's long-term commitment to support young people's life chances.

Care Leavers Champion Danielle Morris, was appointed to Waltham Forest Council as a valued advisor to the Corporate Parenting Board this June and begun working on the Hub and bringing together a Care Leavers Champion group.

Waltham Forest News last caught-up with Danielle Morris in December 2017, when she received an award from Waltham Forest Council for getting a first class degree in business from Brunel University and secured a role with Barnet Virtual School which ensures education is put in place for their children in care.

Danielle was just one-month-old when she was taken into foster care herself. She spent her childhood living with several foster families in Waltham Forest as well as an aunt.

As a care leaver, Danielle's success story may sound exceptional but she is adamant that it does not have to be. Danielle said: "There are opportunities and support for care leavers available – it's just a case of empowering my peers to grab each opportunity which comes their way. Letting them know that they can achieve anything they set their minds to, and helping them to build resilience to overcome any obstacle."

"I love this job. It doesn't feel like work. I'm working with friends and people I know, some which I have lived with in care previously. I'm passionate about helping other care leavers – empowering them to make the most of opportunities. When I was in care, I did my own research.

Some people don't have the support or the confidence to know they can make changes."

In her second year at Brunel University, Danielle worked for The Mayor of London in the Peer Outreach team, leading the Care Consortium project, which worked with care experienced professionals across the whole of the city. It was here she became more aware of changes in policy.

"When I had a council tax bill after leaving university for example, I knew that The Children's Society charity would foot the bill that exempts care leavers from paying council tax – I let Waltham Forest know that I had done this and found out they'd recently signed up to be part of this bill too. The information wasn't easily accessible though. It prompted the council awareness and I was able to tell my care leavers community what they were entitled to so they didn't miss out on that support. Knowledge is key – if you don't know, you can't help yourself, help others or change things."

Of her work already on the Care Leaver's Hub, she explains: "We held a picnic for our first youth club with other care leavers. The plan is to use the hub as an educational space with career workshops, cooking lessons, confidence and life skills. We're also hosting brunch clubs for unemployed young people with career advice that motivates them to make things happen for themselves."

Stacey Fernando, who attends the club, says. "I enjoy attending the Hub and I know I am getting the support I need. I have also made loads of new friends and been able to take part in the exciting opportunities at The Hub."

Can The Care Leaver's Hub help you or someone you know?

If you are a Waltham Forest Care Leaver aged between 16 to 25-years-old and need advice you can access this on Waltham Forest website under the Care Leavers Offer. Please contact Danielle for more information and to join the Care Leavers Champions group on: Danielle.morris@walthamforest.gov.uk

Results from the Big Culture Conversation

How can culture lead to change...

On Tuesday 9 October, the first Big Culture Conversation took place at Leyton Orient FC.

We asked residents, creatives and businesses to join us to find out more about how plans are progressing for London Borough of Culture 2019, and to discuss how the year can be a catalyst for change.

Attended by nearly 100 people, the evening included a panel discussion chaired by Waltham forest Council Leader, Cllr Clare Coghill with local creatives including Harriet Warden, Creative Director at Blackhorse Workshop, Hassan Vawda, Waltham Forest artist and creative, Hazel Durrant, Director at Something and Son Communities, and Oliver Benjamin, Director of Employment and Skills at A New Direction.

The discussion was followed by workshops in which attendees discussed the ways in which the legacy of 2019 could be long-lasting for our local residents, and how it can shine a light on the fantastic cultural activities already happening in the borough.

What was discussed?

When asked: "What does Culture as a catalyst for change mean to you?" Hazel Durrant said: "Culture needs to be more tangible beyond a piece of art that can be thrown away.

What does culture mean to me? It means opportunities opening up, the opportunity for social change."

Oliver Benjamin said: "Culture needs to be used as an aspiration – pride of a place."

When asked how we can help create change through London Borough of Culture, Hassan Vawda said: "We need to challenge the ethos of 'bringing culture to the uncultured'. We can do this by identifying the culture that is happening from within all groups of people, in all places. We need to redefine what we value in terms of what we mean when we say 'culture'."

Harriet Warden spoke about creating space for transition: "Blackhorse Workshop has created the space to give people the belief that they can do it. The space is for professionals, hobbyists, for dream-building. One resident moved to be next to workshop – she came with no skills, went on a course and now has her own furniture business!"

What else?

Guests were asked to contribute ideas around six topics about how

London Borough of Culture 2019 can create positive change in Waltham Forest. A few questions and answers included:

How do we make sure #wfculture19 lives forever?

"We need to understand how we can make sure the whole population of the borough has participated and engaged with culture throughout 2019 in some way and make sure it captures all the voices of Waltham Forest."

What makes you burst with pride?

"Freelancers, small pockets of community groups, connecting with schools and being part of a community."

In brief

Change at the gyratory

Artist's impression of the future gyratory

The new look of the former Walthamstow Gyratory is beginning to take shape as new cycle lanes, increased pedestrian space, planters and landscaping is introduced.

Waltham Forest Council has been working closely with TFL and Network Rail over the last couple of years to create a new traffic bridge over the railway lines at Walthamstow Central. The third bridge has been constructed between the original gyratory structure, after tests showed that the northbound road was no longer able to hold the volumes of traffic relying on it. The former bridge is now transforming into a large public space, complete with new pollution-absorbing shrubs and trees and space for pop up stalls and a Christmas tree, following feedback received from residents earlier in the summer. TFL are also relocating bus stops onto the new bridge so that routes 357 and 97 can continue straight along Hoe Street rather than turn into Walthamstow Bus Station in Selborne Road. These changes, which are expected to improve bus journey times and reliability, and were supported by more than 60 per cent of participants in the TfL consultation. It is expected that the roadworks on Hoe Street will be completed by the end of the year with the remaining planting and road improvements on Selborne Road being completed by spring 2019. Councillor Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment said: "There's no denying this has been a long process, however the use of the area has changed since we began this work and we've had to reconsider our designs to future proof the junction for the additional homes that are going to be built in the new development – literally around the corner. "The new public space will make the junction safer for everyone to use, and be a hive of activity for visitors and residents when they arrive at Walthamstow."

New shared ownership homes on Marlowe Road

Cllr Louise Mitchell, cuts the ribbon assisted by Cllr Simon Miller (on left), Managing Director of Countryside Plc, Andy Fancy and the rest of the team.

Waltham Forest Council has been given the keys to 18 new shared ownership apartments at Feature 17 on the Marlowe Road estate in Walthamstow this week, over two-thirds of which have been bought by local residents.

Of the 18 apartments handed over this week, four have been bought by residents from the old Marlowe Road estate who moved out to allow the regeneration of this area. A further nine are being bought through shared ownership by residents of Waltham Forest.

Feature 17 is one part of the council's ambition to redevelop and rejuvenate the Marlowe Road estate. When complete, the Marlowe Road redevelopment will include a new library, children's play area and public plaza alongside 436 new homes and retail premises.

Waltham Forest Cabinet Member for Housing, Cllr Louise Mitchell, said: "These new family apartments are fantastic – really spacious, and built to a high quality.

"Having a good quality, affordable home in opens up opportunities for families, and especially young people, to improve their life chances and succeed in Waltham Forest. I am delighted to accept these 18 shared ownership apartments and look forward to receiving the keys to the first 34 social rent apartments in December."

Managing Director of Countryside plc, Mr Andy Fancy, said: "I am particularly proud to hand over our shared ownership apartments, with the same specification as the apartments to be sold on the open market. We are also on track to provide 34 social rent homes two months early, meaning families should be able to move in before Christmas."

Access to Blackhorse Road station to be improved

Residents, commuters and visitors will soon find it easier to access Blackhorse Road station when wider pavements, safer crossings and better cycle facilities are built at the junction outside.

Waltham Forest Council has secured funding from Transport for London (TfL) for additional investment on Forest Road outside the busy Victoria line station, following the station's recent upgrade. The station, which sees approximately 14,000 people entering and exiting it each day, recently unveiled a new welcoming ticket hall, better lighting outside and an improved entrance – closer to the housing developments which are currently under construction.

Last year the council held a consultation with residents and local businesses about proposals to create wider pavements, new segregated cycle lanes, improved bus infrastructure and more greenery outside the station. These proposals were designed to make access to the station easier and safer for the 7,000 residents due to move into the 2,500 new homes being created by local regeneration, as well as tourists visiting the nearby Walthamstow Wetlands.

Almost two thirds of people who responded to the consultation supported the plans. Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member of the Environment said: "The area around Blackhorse Road station is changing quickly. We can already see the shells of the new properties being constructed along Forest Road, and there are lots of people already visiting the beautiful Walthamstow Wetlands.

"The pavement and crossings outside the station are already at capacity which is why we are delighted to have secured this additional investment from TfL to make this junction safer, particularly for pedestrians and cyclists."

Works on the junction will begin in February 2019 and are expected to take around 15 months. During the works access to the station will be maintained and the council will be providing temporary bike parking nearby. The council is also working with developers in the area to secure at least one more state of the art secure cycle parking hub, where commuters can keep their bikes protected from the elements, monitored by CCTV and have access to a manned help point 24-hours a day. It is expected that this will be in place by the time the junction works are complete. Whilst these works are taking place the council will begin looking at options for improving the rest of the route between the station and Walthamstow Wetlands.

Wood Street: More homes for social rent

Waltham Forest Council this week received 17 new homes for social rent at 275 Wood Street, Walthamstow – more than doubling the number of homes on the site. The £5.6 million pound project is part of a programme to build 162 new homes for social rent as part of the council's own house building programme.

Waltham Forest Council's Cabinet Member for Housing, Cllr Louise Mitchell, said: "We are committed to providing as many homes for council rent as possible for families on our waiting list and this scheme means another 17 families can move into new social rent homes before Christmas.

"Being able to offer our residents affordable social rent homes gives them the stability they need to lead full, healthy and happy lives in Waltham Forest and this is particularly important for children. We are delivering on our pledge to provide more social rented homes and that local people will always have the first offers for new council homes in the borough."

The Wood Street site had previously been a block of eight flats for social rent. Two of the new homes are accessible for people with disabilities, something that was not possible in the old flats. The project has been delivered on time and within budget.

Sixty Bricks goes up

Sixty Bricks, a newly formed property development company formed by Waltham Forest Council, can announce that the first planning approval has been granted for an exciting new development at Lena Kennedy Close in Highams Park, following a public consultation this June.

The council's Planning Committee approved the proposals on 9 October for 45 properties, from studio apartments up to three-bed units. More than half of the new homes built by the new council-owned company will be available for either affordable rent or shared ownership, and Waltham Forest residents and key workers will be given first priority.

Cllr Louise Mitchell, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "This is great news. Sixty Bricks is a key part of our ambition to provide a decent roof over every resident's head. We were also very clear that the planning permission contained conditions that the developer should work with the council's job brokerage 'Steps to Work' and other training programmes so that all the construction work is offered to local workers, and invest in a minimum of five apprenticeships."

Sixty Bricks has plans to build more than 1,000 homes over five years, alongside new commercial and retail developments. As well as these vital new homes, Sixty Bricks will work to provide public realm improvements in the areas around developments, including playgrounds, parks or green spaces. At Lena Kennedy Close, the existing tennis court at Rolls Park will be refurbished and five new semi-mature trees planted to replace any removed during the construction phase.

In brief

Lea Bridge funding win

A partnership between Waltham Forest, Enfield and Haringey councils has been awarded £5.75 million to provide an economic boost to the Upper Lea Valley area. This includes £750,000 to support existing businesses and attract new ones at Rigg Approach in Lea Bridge.

The investment, which has been awarded through London Councils, will make a substantial contribution to delivering economic growth, boosting productivity and intensifying use of employment land in the Upper Lea Valley, a key regeneration area for London. The money was allocated from London Business Rate Pool and means rates paid by businesses are being used to support new and existing enterprises.

The investment recognises the joint work of the Greater London Authority, Waltham Forest, Haringey and Enfield councils to promote the Upper Lea Valley as London's 'Productive Valley', with the aim of realising its full economic potential. Waltham Forest Cabinet Member for Economic Growth and High Streets, Cllr Simon Miller, said: "This £5.75 million will help the Upper Lea Valley become a hub for enterprise. Waltham Forest Council is committed to using part of the funding to offer loans to support key business sectors and to ensure commercial space is fit for modern businesses to use.

"These loans will help enterprises to grow and attract new investment and businesses to the borough so we can provide more local jobs for local people – a key part of our life chances work.

"I am particularly pleased that £750,000 of the funding is to be spent improving one of the borough's key Strategic Industrial Locations at Rigg Approach. Rigg Approach is an important existing industrial area that has significant potential to accommodate additional businesses and commercial space as part of the wider regeneration of Lea Bridge."
